Friday 13 February 2026

Dear Jaan,

I am not a great writer, nor do I always know how to arrange beautiful words. Still, I am writing this for you from the deepest place in my heart. Every sentence carries my true feelings, even if the language is not perfect.

Especially in English ..which is not my mother language ..I am trying to express myself, because our native languages are different. Maybe my grammar is not always right, maybe the words are simple, but my love for you is clear, honest, and endless. I am choosing this language just so my heart can reach yours.Since you came into my life, everything feels softer and brighter. You are the calm in my chaos, the warmth in my cold days, the light that quietly guides me forward. In your presence, I feel understood beyond words — and that is the most beautiful feeling of all.I cherish our simple moments the most ..our conversations, our laughter, even our silence. With you, I have found a home that is not a place, but a feeling. You make love feel safe, deep, and everlasting.And when I think that next year we will celebrate this day as husband and wife, my heart becomes even more emotional. It will be different .....more complete, more meaningful, more beautiful ...because we will not just be dreaming about forever, we will be living it. The thought of calling you my husband fills me with so much joy and pride.

I promise to stand beside you in every season of life — to support you, respect you, and love you with all that I am. Your dreams matter to me. Your happiness matters to me. You matter to me more than I can fully express.If these words are imperfect, let my heart speak louder than them.Happy Valentine's day❤️❤️

Forever yours.